Claim Objections

1. Claim 1 is objected to because of the following informalities: It appears that the term "plan" in line 7 of claim 1 should be changed to - -plane- -.

Appropriate correction is required.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. Claims 1 and 2 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Glaser et al in view of Cromley, Jr.

Glaser et al discloses a torsion beam axle comprising right and left trailing arms 2, 3, a torsion beam 4, and right and left mount eyes 5. Although the mount eyes do not show the mounting bushes shown in detail, the bushes 5 would include elastic members as noted in lines 58-62 of column 3. The mounting bushes do not have a slope.

Cromley Jr. teaches a trailing arm axle assembly in which the axle beam 18, 18A can be straight, or can have a curvature to impart a camber on the wheels 48A. See figure 7 and lines 45-68 of column 8 and lines 1-10 of column 9. The axles and thus the axle mounts would have a slope such that their center axes would intersect on a plane of the X and Y axes, and also have a slope relative to the Z axis.

From this teaching it would have been obvious to modify the axle assembly of Glaser et al to have a bend in the torsion beam 4 such that the center axes of the mounts 5 would intersect on a plane formed of the X and y axes, and also be sloped relative to the Z axis. This would provide a positive camber to the wheels and thus provide a camber for load-bearing purposes.

Conclusion

3. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure. The references show other axle assemblies.
